Kenneth Jobe, One of Senate Pages, Learned A Lot About Virginia Government

One of the most popular of the Pages at the recent session of the Virginia General Assembly was Kenneth Wayne Jobe, 13, 7th grader at Amherst Elementary School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Jobe, of Amherst, and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. O. Burwell Turner, of Appomattox County.

He was appointed Page in the Senate on nomination of Senator Chas. T. Moses, for the 1960 Session of the General Assembly. He served as Page from January 13 to March 12, 1960.

He was Page for Senators Moses, of this District; William F. Stone, Martinsville; L. R. Wyatt, Danville; James D. Hagood, Clover, and Doorkeeper Tritton.

He was Page for the Committee on Roads and Internal Navigation, of which Senator Moses was chairman. He was also Page for Joint Assessing Committee.

Kenneth completed his duties at 12:25 A. M. Sunday, March 13, when he delivered the final message from Governor J. Lindsay Almond, Jr., to the President of the Senate and Presiding Officer, Lt. Gov. A. E. S. Stephens, to close the 1960 session.

While in Richmond, Kenneth lived at the Y. M. C. A. on Franklin Street. He kept up his school work by studying at night and reporting to his teacher on Saturdays for assignments and check-ups.

Kenneth considers this the most wonreful experience any boy could have. He feels that he will have an interest in the government of Virginia as long as he lives. Among the interesting experiences he had was having breakfast with Governor Almond in the Executive Mansion one morning. The Pages were given a tour of the Mansion by the Governor.

Ready For The Easter Parade!

Above: Carroll Goodrich, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Goodrich, and Brenda Robertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Robertson, are all set for an Easter or any other parade. They are enjoying a ride in a neat cart. The pony is named "Lady."

What I, As A Mother . . . . Expect Of Public Education

(Editor's note: In our issue of last week, Mr. Daneel le Roux, the president of Appomattox Teachers' Association, raised the question: What Is Expected of Our Schools? In this issue, one of a series of answers is presented.)

WHAT I, AS A MOTHER EXPECT OF PUBLIC EDUCATION
By Mary Penn Gills

As one of the thousands of mothers in this great Country of ours, I must rely upon our public school system, operating by the Commonwealth of Virginia, to fortify my child with the proper knowledge that will enable him to achieve the height of his capacity.

It is necessary for me as for most mothers to depend on public education, since I, as they, am not in a position to educate my child privately. Public education has been and still is the foundation for the growth and success of our people and our Country. Through public education our Nation has become the leader in world economy. Our standards of living are the highest in the world. I, as a mother, have seen what public education has done and can do. It has enabled me prepared me to be a better mother. It can do more for my child, for it has grown tremendously in recent years.

Today's schools endeavor to train a child in the field for which he is best suited. (This was not true during my school years.) Through the growth of our public school system, and the increased ability and knowledge of our present-day teachers, I can expect my child to become better prepared for his position in life. The use of aptitude and achievement tests together with pupil counseling by trained personnel can place him in a position to select the field in which he can obtain his scene. The main thing to me is that he is taught to realize the importance of obtaining a public education.

Without public education, I could not expect my child to reach his peak. It has been a boon to me and mine and I expect it to continue to do so. My child's future rests upon the shoulders of those engaged in the field of public education.

(Note: Watch for another in this series in next week's issue.)

Census Count Starts April 1

The Town and County of Appomattox will be among the localities all over the United States eagerly awaiting the result of the 1960 Census, which gets underway on Friday morning, April 1.

Of great local interest will be the answer as to what ten years of population change has shown in the official count.

The first U. S. Census was taken in 1790, and has been repeated at ten year intervals since.

Since Appomattox County was not organized until 1845, the first Census figure for Appomattox are revealed in the Census of 1850. Below are the results of the population in the eleven Census tabulations since that date, for Appomattox County:

1850:	9,116	1910:	8,904
1860:	8,889	1920:	9,255
1870:	8,360	1930:	8,402
1880:	10,030	1940:	9,020
1890:	9,589	1950:	8,764.
1900:	9,662

Thus, the highest recorded population of Appomattox County was in 1880, and since then there has been a downward trend, and it could be that the 1960 Census will show the population of this county to be less than it was 100 years ago.

A downward trend in Appomattox County has persisted for quite a number of decades.

The population of the Town of Appomattox has steadily increased, and is expected to be above the 1,200 mark in 1960.

However, the rural areas of the county have a steady decline, as families have moved to the towns and cities, seeking residence near their employment. Likewise, the Negro population of the county has declined.

Virginia led the nation in population in the First and Second Decennial Censuses, in 1790 and 1800, with counts of 691,737 and 807,509, respectively. In 1960, in the seventeenth Census, the state ranked fifteenth, with 3,313,000 inhabitants. The rate of growth of the state in each decade of the period 1790 to 1930 was below that of the nation as a whole, according to the records of the Census Bureau. In the past two decades, however, the reverse is true. The gain of 640,907 between 1940 and 1950 represented an increase of 23.9 per cent over the 2,677,772 persons counted in 1940.

Virginia, one of the Thirteen Original States, included, in 1790, the areas now constituting the State of Kentucky and West Virginia. The area of the State was reduced in 1791 by the formation of the District of Columbia. Further changes in the Virginia boundary occurred in 1791, 1792, 1846, 1863 and 1866.

"Pie, young fellow? Why, I made pies before you were born."

"O. K. But why selfish now?"
